STEAMBOATING FOR GOLD.

From the Bed of a River.

Extravagant stories are told about the Snake river country in Idaho. As a general thing the gold is very fine, the particles being of so light weight as to be elusive. Save when worked on a large scale, it is difficult to make good wages in recovering the gold. Numerous bars the level character of the outlying lands. as insure sufficient dumping ground, a novel plan of laying the cornerstens at big floating gold saving dredge has been night to make the occasion memorable, constructed and is now at work on the lidaho bank of the Snake river, about 10 ferent points and in such a manner as to miles above Pavette.

dled within the reach of the gold washing machinery with which the craft is rigged. The gravel is scooped up by buckets attached to an endless chain.

There are 48 of these receptacles on a belt 50 feet in length, and each has a capacity of about 20 pounds of dirt, which is delivered into a hopper. This is also an agitator, and the process employed may be described as a steam rocker, with the exception that it has an end motion instead of one sidewise. The gold is caught on copper plates with quicksilver. The tailings are carried off in sluice boxes by the force of a stream of water of 150 mineral inches, supplied by a China pump, run by the engine which drives all the other machinery. The gravel is worked so thoroughly that no gold escapes in the tailings that are dumped into the river. An average of 100 tons of gravel is daily handled, and for this work three-men are employed—an engineer, one to werk the scraper and another who shovels the dirt into a pile so that the buckets can scoop up a full load.

The bar now being worked covers an area of 10 to 15 acres. The gold is on November, A. D. 152. ATTORNEYS AT LAW Lean money on good an agitator, and the process employed may be described as a steam rocker, with the control as a steam rocker, Skeleton Spirited Away. The skeleton of a woman which was unearthed in an unfrequented spot in the outskirts of the city has been stolen. It was left lying on the ground pending the coroner's inquest and has mysteriously disappeared. Another skeleton of a woman was found near the same spot yesterday, buried a few inches under ground. Old timers say that the ground where these skeletons have been found is where the victims of cholera were buried in 1807. They were buried hurriedly, the graves were not marked, and no work was done on the graves more than to get the boxes out of sight.-San

If there ever was a lucky carby, it is Richard McGowan, who for 16 years has stood beside his cab at the Staten Island ferry at Whitehall street gathering passengers and fares. He and the cab had stood there in all sorts of weathers, but the cab soffered more than the man in appearance.

cab had stood there in all sorts of weather, but the cab suffered more than the man in appearance.

Whenever McGowan saw an old lady with white hair and a benignant face come from the ferryhouse, he knew that he would have a fare. She didn't appear wery often, but she always sought out McGowan, handing him a bill in payment and refusing to take the change.

A couple of months ago she told him his cab was getting old and rusty and he should have a better one. The cubman replied that it would cost $500, and he could not afford so much money. One day the white haired woman told him to drive her to a carriage manufactory. They made several trips of that kind. Then the lady, who is Mrs. Frances J. Shaw, the philanthropist, told the astonished McGowan that she was looking for a carriage for him, but could not find one that was smitable, and that he had better buy it for himself. It took him a whole month to find what he wanted. Now McGowan has the finest coupe about South ferry, and he is one of the happiest men in New York.—New York World.
